The Best Friends Made by the Right Use of Riches 1727

separated by the world's longest land border and engaging in over three billion dollars in trade daily, Canada and the United States share security concerns, cultural interests, and a history spanning more than 250 years. Alan Rock, former Canadian ambassador to the United States, has said that this special relationship represents a bond that is beyond practical borders. The rise of nativist sentiment, however, has raised concerns over preserving this relationship. History has made us friends illuminates the nature and dynamics of Canada-US relations, examining their history, attributed meaning, and conceptualization. Contributors consider many angles and perspectives, including the impact of geopolitical change, to determine whether the relationship warrants the moniker "special." They explore whether shared values and demographic similarities continue to cement the relationship and if it still matters. Whether presidents and prime ministers get along while things look different today from when President Kennedy declared what unites us is far greater than what divides us, history has made us friends argues that the Canada-US relationship often narrowly understood or dismissed as a relic of the past continues to be unique and resilient.

An irresistible invitation to share the lives of people who believe in enduring values. Detroit Free Press it began with Benny Hogan and Eve Malone growing up inseparable in the village of Knockglenglen, Benny the only child yearning to break free from her adoring parents, Eve the orphaned offspring of a convent handyman and a rebellious blueblood abandoned by her mother's wealthy family to be raised by nuns. Eve and Benny they knew the sins and secrets behind every villager's lace curtains except their own. It widened at Dublin at the university where Benny and Eve met beautiful Nan Mahlon and Jack Foley, a doctor's handsome son, but heartbreak and betrayal would bring the worlds of Knockglenglen and Dublin into explosive collision. Long hidden lies would emerge to test the meaning of love and the strength of ties held within the fragile gold bands of a circle of friends. Praise for Circle of Friends, a rare pleasure at terrific tale told by a master storyteller. Susan Isaacs, The New York Times Book Review, Circle of Friends welcomes you in the Washington Post.

This edited book draws from work that focuses on the act of telling family stories as well as their content and structure. The process of telling family stories is linked to central aspects of development, including language acquisition, affect regulation, and family interaction patterns. This book extends across traditional developmental psychology, personality theory, and family studies, drawing broadly on the epigenetic framework for individual development articulated by Erik Erikson as well as on conceptions of the family life cycle. The editors bring together contemporary examples of psychological research on family stories and their implications for development and change at different points in the life course. The book is divided into sections that focus on family stories at different points in the life cycle: from early childhood and the beginnings of narrative skill through adolescence, young adulthood, midlife, and then mature adulthood and its intergenerational meaning. During each of these periods of the life cycle, research focusing on individual development within an Eriksonian framework of ego strengths and virtues is highlighted. The dynamic role of family stories is also featured here, with work exploring the links between family process, intergenerational attachment, and storytelling. Sociocultural theories that emphasize how such development is situated in the wider cultural context are also featured in several chapters. This broad lifespan developmental focus serves to integrate the exciting diversity of this work and foster further questions and research in the emerging field of family narrative. The book is intended primarily for researchers and advanced level students in the fields of developmental and personality psychology as well as those in family studies and in gerontology. It may also be of interest to those in the helping professions who are concerned with family therapy and family issues and may, due to its content and illustrative material, have appeal to a wider market of the lay public. The chapters are written in a readily accessible style, and the analyses are presented in a fairly non-technical way. Because family stories are charted across the lifespan, it would be a suitable companion book to a more traditional lifespan textbook in certain courses.

despite the high regard in which francesco petrarcha 1304-74 held st augustine scholars have been inclined to view augustine's impact on the content of petrarch's thought rather lightly wedded to the ancient classics and prioritising literary imitation over intellectual coherence petrarch is commonly thought to have made inconsistent use of st augustine's works adopting an entirely fresh approach however this book argues that augustine's early writings consistently provided petrarch with the conceptual foundations of his approach to moral questions and with a model for integrating classical precepts into a coherent christian framework as a result this book offers a challenging re-interpretation of petrarch's humanism and offers a provocative new interpretation of his role in the development of italian humanism death gender and ethnicity examines the ways in which gender and ethnicity shape the experiences of dying and bereavement taking as its focus the diversity of ways through which the universal event of death is encountered it brings together accounts of how these experiences are actually managed with analyses of a range of representations of dying and grieving in order to provide a more theoretical approach to the relationship between death gender and ethnicity though death and dying have been an increasingly important focus for academics and clinicians over the last thirty years much of this work provides little insight into the impact of gender and ethnicity on the experience the result is often a universalising representation which fails to take account of the personally unique and culturally specific experiences associated with a death drawing on a range of detailed case studies death gender and ethnicity develops a more sensitive theoretical approach which will be invaluable reading for students and practitioners in health studies sociology social work and medical anthropology
