this book presents essential information for the development of a comprehensive sustainable energy policy it examines the diverse types of energy their resource abundance and the material needs to develop and use them and how communities and cities can better control their own destinies by locally managing energy use and generation this approach does not suggest the undoing of existing infrastructures and energy providers but rather a cooperative transition from national regional energy management to a more local centered system the information is the foundation for eight specific legislative initiatives necessary for a national comprehensive sustainable policy that can both facilitate and drive the process of evolution from a carbon energy economy to a sustainable renewable energy future

the hedge maze which is the only type with which most of us have a first hand acquaintance is generally felt to be a survival of a romantic age even though we esteem its function as nothing higher than that of a playground for children many a tender intrigue has been woven around its dark yew alleys mr compton mackenzie for example introduces it most effectively as a lovers rendezvous in the passionate elopement and no doubt the readers of romantic literature will recall other instances of a like nature the story of fair rosamond s bower is one which will leap to the mind in this connection this type of maze alone is worth more than a passing thought but it is far from being the only or even the most interesting development of the labyrinth idea what is the difference it may be asked between a maze and a labyrinth the answer is little or none some writers seem to prefer to apply the word maze to hedge mazes only using the word labyrinth to denote the structures described by the writers of antiquity or as a general term for any confusing arrangement of paths others again show a tendency to restrict the application of the term maze to cases in which the idea of a puzzle is involved it would certainly seem somewhat inappropriate to talk of the cretan maze or the hampton court labyrinth but generally speaking we may use the words interchangeably regarding maze as merely the northern equivalent of the classic labyrinth both words have come to signify a complex path of some kind but when we press for a closer definition we encounter difficulties we cannot for instance say that it is a tortuous branched path designed to baffle or deceive those who attempt to find the goal to which it leads for though that description holds good in some cases it ignores the many cases in which there is only one path without branches and therefore no intent to baffle or mislead and others again in which there is no definite goal we cannot say that it is a winding path bounded by walls or hedges for in many instances there are neither walls nor hedges one of the most famous labyrinths for example consisted chiefly of a vast and complicated series of rooms and columns in fact we shall find it convenient to leave the question of the definition of the words and also that of their origin until we have examined the various examples that exist or are known to have existed
