musical rhythm in the age of digital reproduction presents new insights into the study of musical rhythm through investigations of the micro rhythmic design of groove based music the main purpose of the book is to investigate how technological mediation in the age of digital music production tools has influenced the design of rhythm at the micro level through close readings of technology driven popular music genres such as contemporary r b hip hop trip hop electro pop electronica house and techno as well as played folk music styles the book sheds light on how investigations of the musical temporal relationships of groove based musics might be fruitfully pursued in particular with regard to their micro rhythmic features this book is based on contributions to the project rhythm in the age of digital reproduction radr a five year research project running from 2004 to 2009 that was funded by the norwegian research council a pioneering work in cognitive versification studies scrutinizing the rhythmical means of free verse investigating a previously neglected area of study rhythm in modern poetry establishes a foundation for cognitive versification studies with a focus on the modernist free verse following in the tradition of cognitive poetics by reuven tsur richard cureton and derek attridge every chapter investigates the rhythms of one modern poem by lawrence ferlinghetti sylvia plath and others and engages each element in the broader interpretation of the poem in question in her examination of modernist poetry in english and other germanic languages eva lilja expands her analysis to discuss both the ancient greek and norse origins of rhythm in free verse and the intermedia intersection comparing poetic rhythm with rhythm in pictures sculptures and dance rhythm in modern poetry thus expands the field of cognitive versification studies while also engaging readers writ large interested in how rhythm works in the aesthetic field many metal songs incorporate poetry into their lyrics using a broad array of techniques both textual and musical this book develops a novel adaptation appropriation and quotation taxonomy that both expands our knowledge of how poetry is used in metal music and is useful for scholars across adaptation studies broadly the text follows both a quantitative and a qualitative approach it identifies 384 metal songs by 224 bands with intertextual ties to 146 poems written by fifty one different poets with a special focus on edgar allan poe john milton s paradise lost and the work of wwi s war poets this analysis of transformational mechanisms allows poetry to find an afterlife in the form of metal songs and sheds light on both the adaptation and appropriation process and on the semantic shifts occasioned by the recontextualisation of the poems into the metal music culture some musicians reuse and sometimes amplify old verses related to politics and religion in our present times others engage in criticism or simple contradiction in some cases the bands turn the abstract feelings evoked by the poems into concrete personal experiences the most adventurous recraft the original verses by changing the point of view of either the poetic voice or the addressed actors altering the vocaliser of the narrative or the gender of the protagonists these mechanisms help metal musicians make the poems their own and adjust them to their artistic needs so that the resulting product is consistent with the expectations of the metal music culture memphis gave birth to music that changed the the americas including the southwestern and pacific united states puerto rico bolivia chile cuba and ecuador situated in milieus ranging from the indigenous festivals of the andean highlands to the competitive public gatherings of poet singers in post pinochet chile to the puerto rican dance halls of the hawaiian islands these studies pose anthropological inquiries into the ontology of us about their working conditions and their mental health emma warren music journalist and author singing is crying for grown ups to create great songs or play them with meaning music's creators reach far into emotion and fragility seeking the communion we demand of it however music's toll on musicians can leave deep scars in this important book sally anne gross and george musgrave investigate the relationship between the wellbeing music brings to society and the wellbeing of those who create it's a much needed reality check deglamorising the romantic image of the tortured artist crispin hunt multi platinum songwriter record producer chair of the ivors academy it is often assumed that creative people are prone to psychological instability and that this explains apparent associations between cultural production and mental health problems in their detailed study of recording and performing artists in the british music industry sally anne gross and george musgrave turn this view on its head by listening to how musicians understand and experience their working lives this book proposes that whilst making music is therapeutic making a career from music can be traumatic the authors show how careers based on an all consuming passion have become more insecure and devalued artistic merit and intimate often painful self disclosures are the subject of unremitting scrutiny and data metrics personal relationships and social support networks are increasingly bound up with calculative transactions drawing on original empirical research and a wide ranging survey of scholarship from across the social sciences their findings will be provocative for future research on mental health wellbeing and working conditions in the music industries and across the creative economy going beyond this volume answers the question why do we believe what we believe it examines current research on the concept of beliefs and the development in our understanding of the process of believing it takes into account empirical findings in the field of neuroscience regarding the processes that underlie beliefs and discusses the notion that beyond the interactive exploratory analysis of sensory information from the complex outside world humans engage in an evaluative analysis by which they attribute personal meaning and relevance to the probabilistic representations of objects and events beliefs exert a strong influence on behaviour decision making and identifying and solving problems despite their importance beliefs have until recently not been at the centre of scientific interest in fact belief is an ill defined phenomenon from a transdisciplinary perspective the actual approaches to understanding belief seem incompatible as they attempt to highlight such different topics as belief religion belief spirituality belief faith belief knowledge belief attitude belief disbelief belief illusion and believing brain function this situation contradicts the idea that belief is close to pathological phenomena and that it should be eliminated from scientific discussions rather believing is fundamental for understanding the many problems of every day life in fact the book shows that beliefs are relevant for politics international affairs economy law or religions also in modern societies this book presents the increasing scientific interest in beliefs and believing and reflects the change in focus from the content aspect of belief towards the fluid nature of believing
