Sensory Writing for Stage and Screen 2015 this book explores the relationship between diderot s dramatic theory and plays of the late 1750s and the dramatic practice of g e lessing it proposes a new way of looking at how diderot s theatrical writings influenced other dramatists by situating his theory in the context of the contemporary discourse concerning painting with its emphasis on the creation of illusion as the goal of visual art and of the debates about prose drama one manifestation of the transposition of the arguments about painting into the realm of writing diderot s dramatic theory is shown to transform neoclassical ways of thinking about how plays communicate with their audience by urging the exploitation of artistic signs that are in terms of eighteenth century semiotics natural this approach has profound implications for the form taken by dramatic language which in diderot s view must create an illusion for the ear of the beholder just as the visual signs should create one for the eye the changes that characterise lessing s mature dramatic style are a striking illustration of how the move to the use of natural theatrical signs can transform the writing of plays in particular the evolution that occurs in lessing s capacity to create effective dramatic dialogue before and after 1760 the year when his translation of diderot s theatrical writings was first published provides a fascinating case study of how the new thinking about illusion as an effect resulting from the deployment of natural artistic signs generated a radically different kind of dramatic speech this study also shows how this seismic shift in aesthetic values brought about a reorientation of the creative stance of the dramatic writer playwrights cease to think of themselves as rhetoricians and poets addressing an audience and begin to align themselves instead with the painter positioned before his subject and his canvas
