The Practice of Critical Discourse Analysis: an Introduction

2013-11-26

seminar paper from the year 2002 in the subject english language and literature studies linguistics grade 2 3 b university of mannheim anglistics seminar course proseminar language science language english abstract text linguistic science respectively discourse analysis is a rather young linguistic discipline which was mainly established in the 1960s and 70s it mainly emerged from three linguistic movements rhetoric stylistics and structural analysis of narratives discourse analysis tries to figure out specific schemes which are relevant to define a chain of words as a text as there have always been different definitions of what a text is it is absolutely necessary in this paper which definition is actually used however it has to be said that there is still no one and only valid definition of what a text is thus the beginning of the paper deals with several theoretical subjects and explains the term text that is relevant for the following analysis besides it describes which criteria have to be fulfilled in order to achieve textuality in the course of the analysis the paper applies the introduced text theory to an excerpt of david lodge s novel thinks which was published in 2001 the excerpt s textuality is examined by illustrating how far the seven criteria of textuality are fulfilled this novel was chosen because it combines many different ways of telling the analyzed extract for example is a stream of consciousness and contains many peculiarities therefore it is very interesting to figure out if the passage can be defined as a text without problems furthermore this paper analyzes the relevant peculiarities in the text s structure and in its syntax in the course of this analysis again several necessary theoretical aspects are explained furthermore the text type is named as there are no peculiarities in the text s sound structure and as sign theory does not play a role these two points are not taken into consideration at the end some concluding remarks sum up the text analysis s most important results this essay constitutes yet another approach to the fields of inquiry variously known as discourse analysis discourse grammar text grammar functional 1 syntax or text linguistics an attempt is made to develop a fairly abstract unified theoretical frame work for the description of discourse which actually helps explain concrete facts of the discourse grammar of a naturallanguage 2 this plan is reflected in the division of the study into two parts in the first part a semiformal framework for describing conversational discourse is developed in some detail in the second part this framework is applied to the functional syntax of english the relation of the discourse grammar of part ii to the descriptive frame work of part i can be instructively compared to the relation of tarskian semantics to model theory tarski s semantics defmes a concept of truth of a sentence in a model an independently identified construct analogously my rules of discourse grammar define a concept of appropriateness of a sentence to a given context the task of the first part of the essay is to characterize the relevant notion of context although my original statement of the problem was linguistic how to describe the meaning or function of certain aspects of word order and intonation part i is largely an application of various methods and results of philosophical logic the justification of the interdisciplinary approach is the simplicity and naturalness of the eventual answers to specific linguistic problems in part ii
