the bible forms a key part in the development of critical theological thinking and reflection on experience equally to understand how we as individuals read the bible we need to be critically aware of our own stories and context text and life tradition and experience are inextricably intertwined in a glass darkly offers for the first time a critical dialogue between practical theology and biblical hermeneutics it considers the role of emotional engagement and critical understanding in biblical interpretation from here and presents being critical as an act which is just as much appreciative as it is suspicious merold westphal has been in the foremost ranks of philosophers who proclaim a new postsecular philosophy by articulating an epistemology sensitive to the realities of cognitive finitude and moral weakness he defends a wisdom that begins in both humility and commitment one that always confesses that human beings can encounter meaning and truth only as human beings never as gods the present volume focuses on this wisdom of humility that characterizes westphal s thought and explores how that wisdom expressed through the redemptive dynamic of doubt can contribute to developing a postsecular apologetic for faith this book can function both as an accessible introduction to westphal for those who have not read him extensively and also as an informed critical appreciation and extension of his work for those who are more experienced readers through narcissus glass darkly presents a genealogy and critique of the ideal of conscience in modern philosophical theology particularly in the writings of hobbes rousseau and kant it shows why the apparently emancipatory rejection of heteronomy compromised the ideal of self legislated freedom david pacini argues that despite its advocacy of the popular political value of common understanding the modern religion of conscience has become the achilles heel of both kantian and freudian thought it is doomed to succumb to its own fundamentally narcissistic or self relating orientation avoiding the tenacious cliché that the luminaries of modern philosophy simply replaced god with the self david pacini argues that the modern religion of conscience emerges out of a far more radical kind of disenchantment one in which both god and self are de divinized bereft of divinity the god of modernity becomes empty the self of modernity in its autonomy becomes hopelessly tied to dissociation from origins and to loss of a world left only to itself the conscientious individual has only the world it legitimates through self relating but given that any other world is inconceivable the conscientious individual can never know whether its world is just or merely the expression of self interest paradoxically pacini argues the most formidable proponents of the modern religion of conscience share with their critics a common problem the self legislating self has become both indispensable and impossible within much of modern philosophy and theology this unique and interdisciplinary interpretation of conscience makes an important contribution for scholars and students of modern philosophy christian theology psychoanalytic theory and literary criticism in his long awaited first book of prose poet and essayist sherod santos takes a compelling look into some of poetry's deepest secrets an investigation that leads him to the surprising conclusion that poems have minds of their own minds often inaccessible even to the one who composed them in these essays santos explores not only what he thinks about poetry but also what and how poetry thinks about itself his writings range across the history of western poetry from formative classical myths to modern experimental forms and touch on subjects as diverse as the rhetorical history of cannibalism the political and cultural uses of translation and the current state of american poetry along the way he calls on past poets like ovid baudelaire and phyllis wheatley on twentieth century poets like wallace stevens h d and rainer maria rilke and on writers and thinkers like montaigne walter benjamin simone weil and paul de man these essays explore facets of poetry known best to one who has practiced the art for years from the methods of poetic attention to the processes by which perception is transformed into language and from the illusive relationship between poetry and meaning to the integral relationship between poetry and memory this collection delves into what it means to be a poet and how being a poet is intimately tied to one's social and cultural moment with Santos's trademark flair for seeking out the overlooked and unforeseeable a poetry of two minds is an extraordinary collection that testifies to its author's far-reaching intellectual curiosity readers who have delighted in his insights over the years can now have the satisfaction of having them caught between the covers of this provocative book

do we have to conceive of ourselves as isolated individuals inevitably distanced from other people and from whatever we might mean when we use the word god on becoming god offers an innovative approach to the history of the modern western self by looking at human identity as something people do together rather than on their own Ben Morgan argues that the shared practices of human identity can be understood as ways of managing and keeping at bay the impulses and experiences associated with the word god the self is a way of doing things or of not doing things with god the book draws on phenomenology Heidegger gender studies Beauvoir Butler and contemporary neuroscience to present a new approach to the history of modern identity it surveys existing approaches to modern selfhood Foucault Charles Taylor and proposes an alternative account by investigating late medieval mysticism in particular texts written in Germany by Meister Eckhart and others in the same milieu reactions to the condemnation of Meister Eckhart's teaching for heresy in 1329 offer a microcosm of the circumstances in which something like the modern self arises as people change their behavior toward others toward themselves and toward what they call god the book makes Meister Eckhart and his contemporaries appear as our contemporaries by changing the assumptions with which we approach our own identity to make this change requires a revision of current vocabularies for approaching ourselves and in particular the vocabulary and habits inherited from psychoanalysis the book finishes by exploring the parallel between late medieval confessors and their spiritual charges and late nineteenth-century psychoanalysts and their patients the result is a renewed vision of the Freud's project of finding a vocabulary for acknowledging and nurturing our everyday commitments to others and to our spiritual longings

Irish writer Joseph Sheridan Le Fanu (1814-1873) is one of the leading weird writers of the nineteenth century. The author of Green Tea, Carmilla, Uncle Silas, and other classic works, in this volume the first collection of essays about Le Fanu, three distinguished scholars have amassed a wealth of material on every aspect of the author's life, work, and influence. A biographical section features memoirs of Le Fanu along with reproductions of many portraits of the author. Early reviews of his many books are reprinted, as is important early criticism by M. R. James, E. F. Benson, V. S. Pritchett, and others. Recent essays by Jack Sullivan, John Langan, Victor Sage, and many others discuss a wide array of topics relating to Le Fanu's writing. Nine of these essays are printed here for the first time. All in all, this book provides a definitive guide to the weird fiction of Le Fanu. Gary William Crawford is a widely published poet, scholar, and fiction writer and compiler of a bibliography of Le Fanu. Jim Rockhill is the editor of The Complete Supernatural Fiction of Le Fanu. Brian J. Showers is a fiction writer and literary historian and the co-compiler with Gary William Crawford of Joseph Sheridan Le Fanu: A Concise Bibliography. Together they edit the online scholarly journal Le Fanu Studies.

New Critical Studies on Early Quaker Women, 1650-1800 2018

The modern hope of attaining purely rational and objective knowledge has faltered to the joy of some and worry of others. Philosophy's attempt to see reality with a God's-eye view is increasingly viewed as unlikely or undesirable, but what fills the vacuum now that the modern project is in jeopardy? Through a glass, Darkly examines the thought of Richard Rorty and Bernard Lonergan on the possibility of knowledge without a God's-eye view. Rorty, one of the most influential contemporary thinkers, exposes the utter contingency of all philosophical solutions and intuitions without the pretensions of objective knowledge. Rorty hopes for a liberal order rooted in hope and solidarity rather than fruitless longings for truth, constantly asking us to pay attention to what we actually do when we attempt to know. Lonergan discovers in the fragility of consciousness a modest but invariant foundation for human knowledge, unlike naive forms of realism. Lonergan's answer to Rorty's skepticism reveals Rorty's incomplete escape from Cartesian anxiety. Lonergan's turn to the subject more radically breaks the lure of certainty and reveals Lonergan, not Rorty, as the integral postmodern thinker.

The discovery of America and its further development into a modern state and a nation are the clear instance of how ideology and rhetoric are entwined and how they can encompass widely disparate viewpoints. The essays collected in this book address the topical issues of modern American studies: cultural difference and otherness, gender, race, and ethnicity, class, and power. They represent new texts and contexts approached through the revision, reevaluation, and reconfiguration of canons, thus accommodating the expectations of the heterodox audience. Femininity reconsidered, an ideology of passing away in contemporary world of technical development, race captured within the framework of identity and gender, the rhetoric of blackness approached through racial exploitation, American conquest ideology revealed in a mission of manifest destiny, the 20th-century assimilation rhetoric in the relations between Native Americans and the US federal government, the conservative ideology and apologetic rhetoric of the antebellum South, the critique of the 21st-century American legal system, the evolution of the presidential rhetoric which today addresses a large heterogeneous audience. All these topics impose a transnational interpretation of American culture, which developed as a result of the cross-cultural transformation of European culture, cultures moulded on American soil to finally become a unique reformulation of the very idea of America itself.

these essays interdisciplinary in their approach demonstrate the variegation of the religious imagination from the broadest historical and denominational scope by examining the works of philosophers and theologians of poets painters and novelists from saint mark to jacques derrida and from erasmus loyola and milton to rouault and to andrew greeley the essayists seek to answer the question jesus posed to his disciples who do you say that i am and to anticipate the equally contentious query how do you say who i am the essays together explore the religious imagination through the question of transcendence using both the age old christian imagination and the contemporary world wherein the divisions between religious cultures are less fixed an age of imaginative permeability where the absence of god is as present as the presence of god
