~~an epic and highly readable investigation into our very earliest ancestors focusing on the land corridor~~ thorough which humans passed from africa to europe and the evidence left behind of their lives and deaths struggles and beliefs this is not a book about archaeological sites we shall come across flint tools bones skulls surprising structures and layers of earth that we can date to different periods but they are not the heart of the matter this book is about us human beings and about our place in the world about what we have done where we came from which other humans used to be here why they are no longer with us and how and why our lives have changed it s also about where we went wrong what did early humans do because they had no choice and what is the price we are paying for this now taking as the focus ten sites in israel the land corridor through which the human species passed on its journey from africa to europe the story ranges far and wide from france spain turkey and georgia to morocco and south africa north america columbia and peru the authors follow the footsteps of our ancestors describing the tools they used the animals they hunted and the monuments they built fascinating revelations include the earliest evidence of human use of fire the meaning of cave art and the transformative effect of touching rock the woman for whom 90 tortoises were sacrificed what happened in the levant following the disappearance of elephants the monumental tower built at the lowest place on earth why we should envy modern hunter gatherers and much more this provocative and panoramic book shows readers what they can learn from their ancestors and how the unwavering ability of prehistoric people to survive and thrive can continue into the present p frank lebar recalls the richness of his boyhood growing up in shawnee pennsylvania shawnee on delaware at the turn of the century like many other families who were early settlers along the delaware river the lebars combined farming with fishing trapping and lumbering in a traditional lifestyle sustained by hard work and the rich resources of the river itself frank s memoir encompasses a wide range of activities his earliest memory of a barn raising the typical chores of a farm boy and his experiences in the one room shawnee school although he is from a large family frank s particular companion is his older brother john always ready for a practical joke or adventure together they delight in roaming the countryside checking on traps searching for indian relics or just loafing together they also take a memorable raft ride down the delaware to deliver lumber to the mills around easton in loving detail frank describes the village of shawnee on delaware and its inhabitants his knowledge of people land and river is matched only by his abiding affection for his home the lebars owned the shawnee general store and so young frank is also involved with commercial enterprises perhaps less typical of a pennsylvania farm boy family efforts on the farm were on a large scale partly to supply the store which served as a hub for community social and economic activities frank was in a unique position to observe both his neighbors and the increasing numbers of city people from new york and other areas of the eastern seaboard as they first began to explore this pocono mountain and delaware water gap region on vacation excursions in 1903 a disastrous flood wipes out the family farm and the lebar family fortunes change frank now strikes out on his own and boyhood energy becomes a young man s ambition as he tries his hand at numerous pursuits teaching banking lumbering feed and grain and real estate frank paints a broad view of enterprise in the region and his story has now expanded to include stroudsburg as well as shawnee frank s personal development reflects larger social changes with the coming of the

it must have been a sight well worth seeing when a knight mounted his horse and galloped away from a castle of course his armor was polished and shining and as lowell says of sir launfal he made morn through the darksome gate the children of the castle especially must have watched him with the greatest interest the girls looked wistfully at the scarf or glove on his helmet each one hoping that he who would some day wear her colors would be the bravest man that ever drew a sword as for the boys they could hardly wait for the day to come when they too could don glittering armor and sally forth into the world in quest of adventures even the youngest of these children knew that a boy must pass through long years of training before he could become a knight this began when he was a small child perhaps not more than seven years old it was not the custom for the son of a noble to be brought up in the home of his father he was sent for his education and training to the castle of some lord of higher rank or greater reputation sometimes to the court of the king he was taught to look with the utmost respect upon the man who trained him to be a knight to reverence him as a father and to behave toward him with humility and meekness even if the time ever came when they were fighting on opposite sides the foster son must never harm the man whose castle had been his home in those days of warfare and bloodshed the king himself might well be glad to have as devoted supporters and friends a band of young men who had been carefully trained in the practice of arms it is no wonder that kings and nobles looked upon it as a privilege to receive these boys into their castles indeed when their fathers were inclined to keep them at home the king sometimes demanded that they be sent to him the boys of the days of knighthood were not so very different from those of to day and many of their amusements were the same as now they had various games of ball they played marbles they see sawed and walked on stilts much as if they belonged to the twentieth century of course they played at being knights just as boys to day play at being merchants or manufacturers there is an old picture of some pages as these boys were called playing that two toy knights mounted on wooden horses are having a contest the two horses are pushed toward each other and if either knight is struck by the spear of the other and thrust out of his place he is vanquished
