in 1935 the fdr administration put 40 000 unemployed artists to work in four federal arts projects the main contribution of one unit the federal writers project was the american guide series a collectively composed set of guidebooks to every state most regions and many cities towns and villages across the united states the wpa arts projects were poised on the cusp of the modern bureaucratization of culture they occurred at a moment when the federal government was extending its reach into citizens daily lives the 400 guidebooks the teams produced have been widely celebrated as icons of american democracy and diversity clumped together they manifest a lofty role for the project and a heavy responsibility for its teams of writers the guides assumed the authority of conceptualizing the national identity in the wpa guides mapping america christine bold closely examines this publicized view of the

guides and reveals its flaws her research in archival materials reveals the negotiations and conflicts between the central editors in washington and the local people in the states race region and gender are taken as important categories within which difference and conflict appear she looks at the guidebook for each of five distinctively different locations idaho new york city north carolina missouri and u s one and the oregon trail to assess the editorial plotting of such issues as gender race ethnicity and class as regionalists jostled with federal officialdom the faultlines of the project gaped open spotlighting the controversies between federal and state bureaucracies bold concludes that the image of america that the wpa fostered is closer to fabrication than to actuality christine bold is director of the centre for cultural studies and an associate professor of english at the university of guelph in guelph ontario in his best selling travel memoir the innocents abroad mark twain punningly refers to the black man who introduces him to venetian renaissance painting as a contraband guide a term coined to describe fugitive slaves who assisted union armies during the civil war by means of this and similar case studies paul h d kaplan documents the ways in which american cultural encounters with europe and its venerable artistic traditions influenced nineteenth century concepts of race in the united states americans of the civil war era were struck by the presence of people of color in european art and society and american artists and authors both black and white adapted and transformed european visual material to respond to the particular struggles over the identity of african americans taking up the work of both well and lesser known artists and writers such as the travel writings of mark twain and william dean howells the paintings of german american emanuel leutze the epistolary exchange between john ruskin and charles eliot norton newspaper essays written by frederick douglass and william j wilson and the sculpture of freed slave eugène warburg kaplan lays bare how racial attitudes expressed in mid nineteenth century american art were deeply inflected by european traditions by highlighting the contributions people of black african descent made to the fine arts in the united states during this period along with the ways in which they were represented contraband guides provides a fresh perspective on the theme of race in civil war era american art it will appeal to art historians to specialists in african american studies and american studies and to general readers interested in american art and african american history
