this book offers an engaging and historically informed account of the moral challenge of radically asymmetric violence warfare conducted by one party in the near complete absence of physical risk across the full scope of a conflict zone what role does physical risk and material threat play in the justifications for killing in war and crucially is there a point at which battlefield violence becomes so one directional as to undermine the moral basis for its use in order to answers these questions asymmetric killing delves into the morally contested terrain of the warrior ethos and just war tradition locating the historical and contemporary role of reciprocal risk within both this book also engages two historical episodes of battlefield asymmetry military sniping and manned aerial bombing both modes of violence generated an imbalance of risk between opponents so profound as to call into question their permissibility these now resolved controversies will then be contrasted with the uav exclusive violence of the united states robotic killing conducted in the absence of a significant military ground presence in conflict theatres such as pakistan yemen and somalia as will be revealed the radical asymmetry of this latter case is distinct undermining reciprocal risk at the structural level of war beyond its more resolvable tension with the warrior ethos uav exclusive violence represents a fundamental challenge to the very coherence of the moral justifications for killing in war between 1975 and 1978 the khmer rouge carried out genocide in cambodia unparalleled in modern history approximately 2 million died almost one quarter of the population taking an explicitly geographical approach this book argues whether the khmer rouge s activities not only led to genocide but also terracide the erasure of space in the cambodia of 1975 the landscape would reveal vestiges of an indigenous pre colonial khmer society a french colonialism and american intervention the khmer rouge however were not content with retaining the past inscriptions of previous modes of production and spatial practices instead they attempted to erase time and space to create their own utopian vision of a communal society the khmer rouge s erasing and reshaping of space was thus part of a consistent sacrifice of cambodia and its people a brutal justification for the killing of a country and the birth of a new place democratic kampuchea while focusing on cambodia the book provides a clearer geographic understanding to genocide in general and insights into the importance of spatial factors in geopolitical conflict most people believe that it is sometimes morally permissible for a person to use force to defend herself or others against harm in defensive killing helen frowe offers a detailed exploration of when and why the use of such force is permissible she begins by considering the use of force between individuals investigating both the circumstances under which an attacker forfeits her right not to be harmed and the distinct question of when it is all things considered permissible to use force against an attacker frowe then extends this enquiry to war defending the view that we should judge the ethics of killing in war by the moral rules that govern killing between individuals she argues that this requires us to significantly revise our understanding of the moral status of non combatants in war non combatants who intentionally contribute to an unjust war forfeit their rights not to be harmed such that they are morally liable to attack by combatants fighting a just war this book conducts an in depth analysis into the lawfulness of state sponsored targeted killings under international human rights and humanitarian law it also addresses the relevance of the law of inter state force to targeted killings and the interrelation of the various normative frameworks which may simultaneously apply to operations involving the intentional use of lethal force through a comprehensive analysis of treaties custom and general principles of law in light of jurisprudence doctrine and travaux preparatoires the author demonstrates that contemporary international law provides two distinct normative paradigms which govern the use of lethal force in law enforcement and in the conduct of hostilities based on the resulting normative paradigms the author shows in what circumstances targeted killings may be considered as internationally lawful the practical relevance of the various conditions and modalities is illustrated by reference to concrete examples of targeted killing from recent state practice in essence the book argues that any targeted killing not directed against a legitimate military target remains subject to the law enforcement paradigm which imposes extensive restraints on the practice even under the paradigm of hostilities no person can be lawfully liquidated without further considerations as a form of individualized or surgical warfare the method of targeted killing requires a microscopic interpretation of the law regulating the conduct of hostilities which leads to nuanced results the author concludes by highlighting and comparing the main areas of concern arising with regard to state sponsored targeted killing under each normative paradigm and by placing the results of the analysis in the wider context of the rule of law
