how childhood challenging violent or aggressive behaviour ccvab is discussed both historically and more recently in 2017 thorley and coates felt they were grappling with an enigma when trying to explain child to parent violence and abuse cpva due to the various limitations of definitions created for example was there a difference in behaviour displayed between cpv child to parent violence compared to cpva child to parent violence and abuse or vcb violent challenging behaviour or vcb violent childhood behaviour or apva adolescence to parent violence and abuse alternatively were definitions developed by professionals depending on which lens they saw the behaviour through or were terms used to reflect what families described the behaviour to be or perhaps terms varied depending on the age of the child for this reason they introduced childhood challenging violent or aggressive behaviour ccvab as an umbrella term for all of the previously used acronyms adopting ccvab as a single definition allowed for all children to be included up to the age of 18 years old as per legal definitions and onto 25 years old for those with send this definition recognised that many of the behaviours displayed were not towards parents directly and could involve property damage be directed at siblings or be displayed indirectly towards others including peers at school or school staff the aim of this project set out to critically analyse policing childhood challenging violent or aggressive behaviour responding to vulnerable families by reflecting on more than 9 months of reported incident data there is an accepted barrier in developing analysis of childhood challenging violent or aggressive behaviour ccvab due to the nature of the beast generally speaking families do not or will not discuss violence in the home in most situations be this adult to adult child to adult adult to child it is acknowledged the data is an insight only rather than a whole view of ccvab this insight is a necessary step for developing a more informed approach to policing childhood challenging violent or aggressive behaviour at times the officers attending are unable to offer any real intervention due to the age of the child involved something that is beyond their control for this reason the thoughts of schon come to mind where in the varied topography of professional practice there is a high hard ground overlooking a swamp or the outsider professional lens that ccvab is seen the professional lens such as that of a responding officer can allow for application of theory where on the high ground manageable problems lend themselves to solution through application of research based theory and technique this oversight means there is no mechanism for the police to detail the incident other than refer the family to relevant child service agencies current and previous evidence from research and working with families experiencing ccvab details how ccvab can commence from age 2 3 years and more frequently commences between the ages of 6 9 years than at any other age this means that at the time of police involvement the escalation of ccvab behaviours may have been ongoing for more than 6 years without any intervention support or professional awareness of the situation this unreported and unsupported position can leave families in the swampy lowland where messy confusing problems defy technical solution the impact of stop and frisk policing on a south bronx community what s it like to be stopped and frisked by the police while walking home from the supermarket with your young children how does it feel to receive a phone call from your fourteen year old son who is in the back of a squad car because he laughed at a police officer how does a young person of color cope with being frisked several times a week since the age of 15 these are just some of the stories in no place on the corner which draws on three years of intensive ethnographic fieldwork in the south bronx before and after the landmark 2013 floyd v city of new york decision that ruled that the nypd s controversial stop and frisk policing methods were a violation of rights through riveting interviews and with a humane eye jan haldipur shows how a community endured this aggressive policing regime though the police mostly targeted younger men of color haldipur focuses on how everyone in the neighborhood mothers fathers grandparents brothers and sisters even the district attorney s office was affected by this intense policing regime and thus shows how this south bronx community as a whole experienced this collective form of punishment one of haldipur s key insights is to demonstrate how police patrols effectively cleared the streets of residents and made public spaces feel off limits or inaccessible to the people who lived there in this way community members lost the very street corner culture that has been a hallmark of urban spaces this profound social consequence of aggressive policing effectively keeps neighbors out of one another s lives and deeply hurts a community s sense of cohesion no place on the corner makes it hard to ignore the widespread consequences of aggressive policing tactics in major cities across the united states in this comprehensive guidebook Amdur and Hutchings offer law enforcement officers a comprehensive set of strategies to keep themselves as well as the general public safe while functioning at the highest level of professionalism when dealing with people suffering from mental illness. The 1st section is tactical field safety and strategic planning on one side to honing your intuition to pick up early signs of danger on the other. Then the authors focus on what we can do to achieve a state of powerful calm. They offer specific strategies including a method of breathing for the purpose of maintaining one's own center in crisis situations. They then discuss specific behaviors ranging from confusion and obsessive concerns to psychosis, mania, and acute disorganization. They discuss interactions with opportunistic and manipulative individuals, at worst those referred to as psychopaths—people who present a danger to the psychological and physical well-being of anyone with whom they come in contact. Amdur and Hutchings do not merely confine themselves to the important subject of despondent suicidal individuals who attempt to kill themselves; they also offer strategic interventions for parasuicidal individuals—those who either threaten to harm themselves or repetitively do so, requiring almost constant involvement of police, hospitals, and the mental health system. In one very important chapter, the authors discuss suicide by cop. They then move on to a discussion of anger and potentially violent behavior, whether directed at law enforcement officers or others. The authors give succinct information on how to immediately recognize different modes of aggression, whether displayed by adults, youth, or children, and then outline how to quickly and effectively implement de-escalation or control tactics best suited to deal with the type of aggression one is facing. The Thin Blue Lifeline is tactically based from start to finish. This book can function as the foundation of any law enforcement crisis intervention team program, providing a comprehensive course of study of boots-on-the-ground encounters with emotionally disturbed individuals. In the same vein, the information in this volume provides core information on communication, which will be invaluable to any crisis hostage negotiation team.

represents both sides of the problem of violence in the lives of girls: girls as victims of violence and girls as perpetrators of violence. To fully understand the problem of violence, it is essential to consider both sides. The Violence Coin provides perspectives from multiple disciplines using both quantitative and qualitative methodologies, thereby providing a fuller understanding of the issues. It provides a bridge from research on causal factors and developmental course to research on intervention.
