this book begins with a discussion of the human life cycle and then uses that discussion and other ideas to paint a general picture of what human lives are like while the first part looks at human development and change the second part of the book explores what all human lives are like philosophical ideas and methods are central to this book although it is difficult to subcategorize it into any familiar subdiscipline of philosophy it draws on modern concepts from psychology and social science in order to portray an image of human life and lives and to enable readers to easily understand the notion of human development in a very specific and directed way although cognitive development and the development of motor skills are two examples of forms of human development this book homes in on a particular and arguably more synoptic way of seeing our development which is in relation to and occurs within the human life cycle this book is an enlightening read for a broad range of philosophy scholars articulating and defending a view that is neither as pessimistic nor as optimistic about human life as previous views have been

this book provides a critical deconstruction of the human development framework promoted by the united nations development programme undp since 1990 taking the human development reports of the undp as its starting point for reflection this book investigates the construction of this framework as well as its political function since the end of the cold war the book argues that the undp s discourse on development relies on essentialist philosophical cultural and political assumptions dating back to the 19th century and concludes that these assumptions also present in the mdgs and sdgs impede a full grasp of the complex and multi layered global problems of the current world whilst development critiques traditionally relied on liberal marxist or foucauldian theoretical frameworks and focused on epistemological or political economy issues this book draws on the post foundational and post structuralist work of ernesto laclau and jacques derrida and proposes an ontological and relational reading of development discourses that both complements and further develops the insights of previous critiques this book is key reading for advanced students and researchers of critical development studies political science the un and sustainable development
