Ancient Jewish Prayers and Emotions

2015-11-13

given the recent interest in the emotions presupposed in early religious literature it has been thought useful to examine in this volume how the jews and early christians expressed their feelings within the prayers recorded in some of their literature specialists in their fields from academic institutions around the world have analysed important texts relating to this overall theme and to what is revealed with regard to such diverse topics as relations with god exegesis education prophecy linguistic expression feminism happiness grief cult suicide non jews hellenism qumran and jerusalem the texts discussed are in greek hebrew and aramaic and are important for a scientific understanding of how rabbinic judaism and early christianity developed their approaches to worship to the construction of their theology and to the feelings that lay behind their religious ideas and practices the articles contribute significantly to an historical understanding of how jews maintained their earlier traditions but also came to terms with the ideology of the dominant hellenistic culture that surrounded them for many centuries jewish prayer was so dominated by its male creators and male readers that the jewish woman s role in prayer seems to have been all but obliterated yet jewish women have always prayed and before prayer became standardized into a formal liturgy israelite women offered up spontaneous petitions and hymns to god as freely as did men while they may not have been able to help constitute a minyan and while many did not know hebrew or aramaic women produced and used material for prayer at home the yiddish tkhines had its origin in a form of supplicatory prayer in the talmud whose original intent was to allow for individual private devotion during the standard prayer service the private yiddish prayers and devotions for jewish women continued to use this term they emerged in the world of premodern ashkenazic jewry and represent one of the richest and least known forms of jewish religious literature because modern sensibility seemed to reject them and because yiddish was quickly forgotten by second and third generation jews in the west they have been sadly neglected although a few have been individually translated into english this is the first bilingual anthology ever to appear the prayers in this volume are characterized by a highly personal and intimate style and mark occasions in the religious calendar such as the tkhine for the blessing of the new moon as well as occasions in the life of a woman such as the tkhine for a mother who leads her child to kheyder for the first time the tkhines are of great appeal and value to those who wish to hear the voices of jewish women in history study yiddish literature and culture or create new expressions of spirituality

The Merit of Our Mothers

during the past few decades a great amount of scholarly work has been done on the various prayer cultures of antiquity both graeco roman and jewish and christian in jewish studies this burgeoning research on ancient prayer has been stimulated particularly by the many new prayer texts found at qumran which have shed new light on several long standing problems the present volume intends to make a new contribution to the ongoing scholarly debate on ancient jewish prayer texts by focusing on a limited set of prayer texts scil a small number of those that have been preserved only in greek jewish prayers in greek tend to be undervalued which is regrettable because these prayers shed light on sometimes striking aspects of early jewish spirituality in the centuries around the turn of the era in this volume twelve such prayers have been collected translated and provided with an extensive historical and philological commentary they have been preserved on papyrus on stone and as part of christian church orders into which some of them have been incorporated in a christianized form for that reason these prayers are of great interest to scholars of both early judaism and ancient christianity

Early Jewish Prayers in Greek

in this collection of essays professor zahavy explores the origins and early history of prayer in judaism he examines the growth of rabbanic liturgy from immediately after the destruction of the temple in 70 ce until the close of the talmud of the land of israel zahavy shows how rabbanic rules for prayer reflect the historical circumstances of the jews in late antique israel he argues based on close textual analysis that rabbis had little influence over the governance of synagogues in the first and second centuries

To Pray As A Jew

to pray is to touch the face of heaven prayer is a divine privilege extended to all humanity we have been given the right to enter into the presence of the god of the universe the god of abraham isaac and jacob but when we approach an awesome god what words do we bring as our offering what praises and exultations do we offer how do we approach him with our deepest feelings and our most urgent needs the tefillot tamid siddur is designed as a tool for those who are beginning their journey into messianic jewish prayer we have specifically created this abbreviated introductory siddur for those who desire to begin a life of prayer but need a place to start this siddur is designed to be used for shacharit morning and mincha afternoon prayers during weekdays the tefillot tamid siddur is designed to help one become familiar with the core prayers of the set times of daily prayer it is not only our duty but also our privilege to enter daily into the divine presence through this constant interaction our souls are tethered to the holy one of israel through these continual daily appointments our souls are fed and our spirits are revived just as a person would not consider going days without food we should also consider it equally damaging to go days without prayer to nourish our souls our prayer for you is that your prayers ascend to the throne of heaven and that you are transformed in the process

Hebrew Daily Prayer Book

some degree of spiritual enlightenment must be supposed to account for the overall tolerance even receptivity of the people though they refused to comply with the prophets uncompromising demands and occasionally persecuted one or another of them as a rule they allowed them to preach and even spawned devotees who reverently preserved their speeches until canonization unsupported by power and wealth the classical prophets can have persisted for centuries only because they were rooted in loamy spiritual soil the populace constituting that soil deserves to be appreciated no less than the exotic flowers that towered above it what was the spiritual loam that prepared israel s soil so that prophecy could thrive in it any answer to this question must give due consideration to the popular life of prayer for it was in extemporized praying that the israelites experienced a nonmagical approach to god in which form was subordinate to content here in immediate contact with a god who searched the conscience and the heart they were sensitized to sincerity in self disclosure to god and finally it was in prayer that they had constantly to face the issue of adjusting their ways to god s in order to obtain his favor greenberg finds in this rich life of private prayer a setting for the high religious ideas and the scathing critique of worship which characterized the genius of the prophets of the eighth and ninth centuries bc this masterful evaluation of biblical prose prayer a tradition independent of experts and special places suggests an explanation for the unprecedented democratization of worship in postbiblical judaism

most people don t know or don t realize that the virgin mary was jewish she was born hebrew to a hebrew tribe and according to some of the writings she was related to david as a jewish woman of that time she didn t speak english most likely she spoke hebrew or aramaic as a jewish woman she also celebrated the jewish religion in the manner and traditions of her time and stature in society but how did the virgin mary pray well most likely she prayed in hebrew and for this she used the hebrew alphabet many people believe that the hebrew alphabet was also used by god to create the universe and everything in it as according to genesis in the bible because of this hebrew is a very special language in this book i introduce prayer supplications to the virgin mary these are spiritually inspired and completely new they are also unique as they include english and hebrew what is so exciting is that the prayers in the book include the holy language that the sacred mother used and about the hebrew alphabet most people don t know that each of the 22 letters in the hebrew alphabet have meaning within themselves in contrast in the english language the letters of the alphabet mostly don t carry meaning within themselves for instance the m just means m in english but in hebrew the m or mem means water it is therefore a symbol and recalls that symbol when spoken or written in addition every one of these letters has esoteric meaning and in my opinion carry the power of their meaning within furthermore according to esoteric knowledge the understanding of these meanings adds value to the letters

although i make no claims about it i think adding the hebrew letters to marian prayers make for beautiful and meaningful inspiration in addition this book not only offers prayers that use the sacred hebrew alphabet but it also gives a translation of the letters meanings the book also includes pretty drawings these can be collected within the book or they can be cut out and hung and used for ritual or for decoration i hope everyone enjoys this book thank you for your patronage
