the Ramsar Convention was established in 1971 to ensure the conservation and wise use of wetlands across the world. India joined the convention in 1982. However, in the past 50 years, despite Ramsar's incredible achievements, the threat to wetlands across the globe, including India, has not diminished. This book studies the governance of multi-use wetlands in India. The volume provides an exhaustive analysis of rural, peri-urban, and urban human-made wetlands to establish the relevance of institutional design and the effective role of authority in governing multi-use wetland ecosystem services. The author argues that the most challenging task in governing wetlands is to frame institutional choices that users and non-users comprehend and agree to pursue under alternative property rights regimes. Drawing on extensive fieldwork, the book provides a broader look into the causes and consequences of wetland ecosystem degradation and offers insights into improved sustainable management systems for different types of multi-use wetlands. It will be indispensable for students and researchers of environmental studies, sustainable development, biodiversity conservation, agricultural, natural, and environmental resource economics.

This book explores the paradox of women's paid and unpaid work in India. It examines key themes including historical discourses, macroeconomic policies, employment trends, issues of tribal areas, public services, and infrastructure, climate change, and gendered migration and vulnerability of girl children. It highlights the play of gender norms, resource rights, identities, and agency in women's work, building on feminist theoretical frameworks and empirical analyses from microstudies. The volume offers fresh perspectives for research and policy on women's work in the global south. A timely intervention, this multidisciplinary book will be useful to scholars and researchers of political economy, labour studies, women's gender studies, public policy, economics, development studies, sociology, South Asian studies, and global south studies. It will interest planners, policymakers, gender advocates, civil society organisations, human rights bodies, and international organisations working towards ensuring gender equality and women's rights.
