the objective of this nato advanced research workshop was to discuss our current understanding of the role of clouds in climate and chemistry the range of topics discussed during the workshop included modeling of clouds in gcms observations of the cloud micro physical properties the water vapor cycle troposphere stratosphere exchange role of in cloud transport in tropospheric ozone regulation of current and paleo climate by clouds and anthropogenic sulfate aerosols and modification of cloud properties the essence of the discussions is captured in the accompanying summary by the rapporteurs and the chapters by some of the speakers the underlying message is that significant progress has been made resulting in exciting new developments in our perception of the role of clouds in the global system the tropical convective cirrus cloud systems emerge as a major influence on the climate system micro physical processes such as the rate of precipitation and re evaporation of ice particles seem to regulate the large scale vertical distribution of water vapor which is the dominant greenhouse gas water vapor data collected during the central equatorial pacific experiment cepex document the large moistening effect of deep convection on scales of thousands of kilometers a major chemical finding in the same region was the observation of extremely low ozone 8 volume mixing ratios of less than 10 in the stratosphere troposphere of the central equatorial pacific extending over a distance of about 2000 km this finding establishes the pacific as a major chemical sink region for tropospheric ozone everyday the headlines bring news of the latest health scare with worrying predictions for where developments in science will take us we want and need to understand the phenomena that influence our lives but science is often more subtle and more complicated than the headlines would suggest over a diverse range of subjects robin baker proves that the science we as consumers believe to be true is often an oversimplification a convenient way of explaining complex subjects which are little understood his investigations reach their own startling conclusions could it be possible for example that using sunscreen is actually increasing our chance of skin cancer more and more people are taking prozac but does science have an easy answer to explain why we all know the arguments in favour of conservation but could there be strong biological arguments against it a thought provoking author who forces you to re examine widely held beliefs for most of the twentieth century west virginia was a college basketball hotbed its major programs were a success but perhaps even more successful was the west virginia intercollegiate athletic conference composed of fifteen schools that rarely earned headlines but set many records and became an identifiable part of small town culture and a source of state pride this ethos exists today in small town kentucky and indiana but struggles to survive in west virginia part of the reason is the state s population decline since the 1950s that author bob kuska argues along with the rise of cabl
